WHO SHOOK THE JAR?

A parable by Elly Djahon

You put black ants and red ants in a jar. You see that the ants are not fighting. But if you shake the jar, both groups of ants start fighting because they both think the other is the enemy. But the real enemy is the one who shook the jar. In today's society, people fight. They think that the person they are fighting is the enemy. But, the real question is...Who shook the jar?

QUOTABLE QUOTE

"To go against conscience is neither safe nor prudent."
-Martin Luther

Our students represented themselves and our school well at the BMSO concert. They dressed so nicely and used excellent etiquette. I believe it was everyone's first visit to a concert of this kind. Afterward, at Denny's, another customer asked where we were from and commented on the well-behaved students.
